TUNE-BRUCE'S ADDRESS.

All my sons, to arms! to arms! Leave your fleeks, and herds and farms, Love's allurements, beauty's charms Rush to meet the enemy. Abolitia, full of hate, Sends her slaves to subjugate Each and every Southern State. Everything's in jeopardy.

Coming both by land and sea. Moving on like destiny, Numbers near infinity, Desecrate my sacred soil. Brutish fiends! they do not spare Tender age or hoary hair, Matron chaste or maiden fair : Blending murder, rape and spoil.

All my land, from shore to shore Shakes beneath the cannon's rear, Thousands, from their beds of gore, Charge you to avenge their fall; Honor waves you to the fray; Duty says, "away laway !" I command you to obey This their solomn, dying call.

Strike for liberty and right; Never yield to lawless might: Independence must be won. Born were you to live as slaves? Stigmatized as traitor-knaves, Sneak will you to cowards' graves?
Sous of peerless Washington! Washington is all my own;

Join your brothers in the fight;

Henceforth, therefore, be it known, O'er the world in every zone, Washington is my name, To his fame and honor bright, Abolitia has no right : Forfeited, forever quite Is her old and doubtful claim.

But, alas! how sad my doom! Father's little death-bed room, Lands, and lawns, and hallowed tomb, Nubject are to brutal force. Yes, with most despotic rule, There usurps she through her tool Hanks, the tyrant, knave and fool, Mean enough to sell his corse. Void of honor, truth and shame, Tried she has to steel his fame,

Charges false and infamous. How much meaner, can you tell; Would it be for her to steal, And, in market, hawk and sell His remains, so dear to us? From her desecrating hand Rescue them his house, and land:

omiting upon his name

Freemen fall, or freemen stand, Gracing Southern chivalry, Dealing death at every blow, Lay her bloody vandals low, Tramping o'er them as you go, On to death or victory.
